Subterranean Telegraphy. The dispatches announce a new sysem of telegraph wires, the patents for which have just been purchased by the Western Union telegraph. It has long been a favorite theory with many that underground lines would ultimately take the place of aerial lines, but heretofore the actual practice has been far from satisfactory. The expense was too great; the difficulty experienced in finding faults in the buried wires and from all appearances we are destined to receive a stream of emigration from serious barriers to the successful intro-duction of subterranean telegraphy. of the bone and sinew of Europe. About 70 per cent. of the emigration lands at Castle Garden, New York. The destination of the emigrants of 1878, as MANSION HOUSE recorded there, is full of significance in connection with the political outlook. While 38 per cent. remained in New York city and State, and the Western States, exclusive of Utah and the Pacific Coast, absorbed 33 per cent., the South received hardly over 2 per cent. That this is in accordance with the general course of emigration is shown by the last federal census. The proportion of foreign to native-born recorded for the whole country is 14.44 per cent.; JUDGE ratio in most Southern communities is less than 2 per cent. That these fair and fertile regions should be shunned by foreigners seeking to better their condition by hard work, is the strongest commentary on the effect abroad of the evil reputation for violence and brutality earned by the South. The grand total of emigration to the United States, to the close of 1877, including the estimate for the early years when no statistics were preserved, is 9,880,793, which it need hardly be said is unparalleled in previous human experience. In coming ages the rows of tabulated figures which preserve its data, and from which we have selected a few of the most telling facts, commonplace and uninteresting as they may seem to us, will be vested with a vital historic and ethnological significance, as indicating the origin of the American race of the future.—Boston

Complexional Indications.

The complexion of persons whose digestion is out of order, who are billous, or who lack vigor, always exhibits an unhealthy tint. It is by regulating the bodily organs and promoting digestion and assimilation, that the parchment hue indicative of ill health, is banished from the checks. To rectify the fault of a sallow complexion, use Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, an invigorant and alterative which removes those obstacles to renewed strength, physical comfort and personal attractiveness—an imperfect digestion and secretion, and a disordered condition of the bowels. Persistence in the use of this inestimable corrective and tonic will assuredly result in renewed physical regularity and vigor, will tend to increase bodily substance, and cause the glow and clear color of health to return to the sallow, wasted cheek.
